

Pamela Roylance

Biography

Pamela began her professional acting career in 1982 with two memorable roles. The first was as coach Jana in the now-classic slasher film Slumber Party Massacre; the second (a role she could actually tell her family about) was as Sarah Carter in the popular NBC-TV series Little House: A New Beginning. The following year, she played the role of Dr. Sandy Horton on NBC-TV's daytime drama Day of Our Lives. Since Days, her career has blossomed into an impressive list of guest star roles on many popular television series, including Grey's Anatomy, Criminal Minds, Mad Men and Chuck, to name a few.

Pamela has also starred in several films-for-television for Hallmark and Lifetime, including Cradle Swapping, My Christmas Love and A Father's Secret. She also played the recurring character of Missy's mother, Evelyn Belknap, on the popular television series Jack & Bobby and the recurring role of Judge Peecham on the series Justice.

Her theatre resume is extensive and includes roles in dozens of plays, including the critically-acclaimed Los Angeles production of 100 Saints You Should Know.

Pamela's extensive feature film credits include the previously referenced Slumber Party Massacre, Deadly Intent, On Her Own, Addicted to His Love, Hexed, The East, The Woman, Still Here, the Academy Award-winning The Social Network and the soon-to-be released The Creatress.